STRENGTHS AND CONCERNS REGARDING THE NGO PROGRAMMES AND RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE NEXT PROGRAMMING PERIOD

In preparation for the new programming period of the EEA and Norway Grants, the Operators¹ present their view of the strengths and weaknesses of the NGO Programmes 2009-14.

STRENGTHS (recommended for continuation in the next programming period)

1. Areas of support compatible with the NGO sector

The current areas of support are tailored to the specifics of the NGO sector. Importantly, they avoid duplicating the competencies and priorities of government programmes. They are also broad enough to allow for adaptation to the specific needs and condition of the civil society sectors in the different countries.

The Operators nevertheless propose to improve the formulation of the core areas as currently some of them are very general (for example “Democracy”, which covers almost everything) while others are much more specific (for example “Gender-based violence”). The Operators suggest to streamline them in more focused thematic priorities (see below) to achieve greater clarity and consistency of content and facilitate achievement of tangible outcomes:

- Participatory democracy – engagement of citizens in dialogue with authorities, participation in decision making processes, policy oriented activities, etc.
- Good governance and transparency – civil scrutiny over institutions of public interest (watchdog activities), disclosure of reprehensible practices / irregularities, endorsement of corrective and remedial measures, etc.
- Human rights and anti-discrimination – protection of human rights, including the rights of women, children and minorities: ethnic, religious, sexual, etc., counteracting discrimination and prejudices, combating racism, xenophobia, hate speech, hate crime, extremism, etc.
- Social justice / inclusion – preventing economic, social, political and cultural inequalities and exclusion (because of age, disabilities, place of living - rural areas, poverty), provision of welfare and basic services, etc.
- Environmental protection and sustainable development – NGO involvement in actions related to biodiversity and climate change, protection of nature, promoting sustainable use of natural resources, educating and mobilising citizens to protect the environment, etc.
- Youth empowerment – opening up space for young people to articulate their needs and interests, to involve them in shaping public policies, especially those concerning access to education, the labour market and social welfare. creating opportunities for upgrading their skills and gaining knowledge, supporting employability, etc.

¹ The NGO Programmes are managed by Programme Operators or Fund Operators, depending on whether they are contracted by the Focal Point or directly through the FMO. For ease of reading, they are referred to in the text as Operators, regardless of this distinction.

- Civil society growth – self-organization of citizens to take actions in defence of the public good, mobilizing citizens to respond to the different needs in their communities, introducing social innovation, developing volunteerism, etc.
- NGO sector development – strengthening capacity of NGOs, developing the enabling environment for the growth of the civil society sector, enhancing networking, coalition building and cross-sectoral cooperation, etc.

2. Country specifics respected

The framework of the programme area allows the Operators to design their activities in accordance with the specific social context, priority issues, role and potential of the NGO sector in the individual countries. This approach is crucial for the promotion of democratic values across Europe.

3. NGO Programmes entrusted to local NGOs

Local Operators with relevant knowledge of the potential and needs of the civil society sectors help to increase the efficiency and impact of the NGO Programmes in each of the countries. They have a genuine interest to operate the NGO Programmes in a timely, effective and accountable way.

Entrusting the Grants funding to local NGOs – as it is the case in most of the beneficiary countries in the current programming period – provides added value by strengthening the sector's role in ensuring economic and social cohesion in Europe and by highlighting the need to build a supportive and competent NGO sector in Europe. These Operators are frequently greatly experienced grant makers and promoters of social change.

However, non-NGO entities with relevant knowledge of civil society sectors shall be eligible to operate NGO Programme.

4. Option for contracting Operators directly by the FMO

There are important advantages of contractual relations between Operators and the National Focal Points: joint effort to develop the sector and achieve the objectives of the EEA and Norway Grants; nurture feeling of joint ownership of the programme; establish relations between the government and NGOs that can be useful in other settings; matching contribution from national budget which enlarges the pool of funds available for projects; no need for a bank guarantee from the Operator. However, in the previous programming period these advantages were in some cases overshadowed by excessive red-tape, over-concentration on compliance with administrative requirements and financial reporting, little attention paid to the projects' content and programme non-financial objectives. Not all of the Focal Points kept the administrative requirements at a reasonable level securing smooth programme implementation.

Against this background, direct contracting of the Operators by the FMO has many advantages: it entails serious reduction of administrative burden and completely eliminates payments delays; provides more flexibility in programme's operation and allows for concentration on projects content and results.

The case of Hungary shows an additional safeguarding effect of direct contracting. Government pressure on the Operator would have been much worse if it had not been directly contracted by FMO. Such a situation might be repeated in other countries of Europe threatened with the rise of nationalistic and isolationistic tendencies.

5. Networking and exchange of information encouraged

Creating opportunities for networking, information and experience sharing contribute to effective solving of emerging issues, as well as mutual inspiration in addressing various social issues and the development of the capacities of the Operators as well as the Grantees.

ISSUES OF CONCERN AND RECOMMENDATIONS

6. Lack of continuity between programming periods

In the majority of countries where the EEA and Norway Grants are present, the NGO Programmes provide strategic resources of relevant volumes for the civil societies. They strategically address burning social issues important for sustaining democratic systems and supporting social innovation. One shortage of this funding is that it comes in ‘waves’: the NGO Programme allows for the development of certain capacities within the civil society sectors that are difficult to sustain during periods when no comparable funding from other sources is available.

The impact of such ‘waves’ for the functioning of the NGO sector is disruption and uncertainty. The EEA Grants correctly expect the NGO Programmes to tackle complex social challenges (addressing poverty and social exclusion, facing up to intolerance, changing processes and behaviour), but this is feasible only if a longer-term perspective can be assumed.

The lack of continuity also affects the Operators themselves: they develop professional structures and capacities of relevant quality for management of grant making with internationally accepted standards, but in the absence of funding ‘in between’ they have to build up relevant capacities from scratch with each new programming period.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Ensure funding for the next programming period overlaps with the current period or create a “bridge fund” from the current Programme to ensure minimum funding for the in-between period (e.g. from the remaining funds not disbursed until the end of the current Programme). Depending on the available resources, this “bridge fund” may support capacity building activities for NGOs and/or small grant scheme(s) to address emerging issues.
2. Simplify the process leading to the establishment of the NGO Programmes in next programming period. Assuming that the MoU negotiations lead to the establishment of an NGO Programme in the new programming period, and that this will be directly contracted through the FMO, start consultations on the programme’s contract before the MoU is signed.
3. With the exception of improvements and suggestions listed below, maintain the current regulatory structure of the NGO Programme to avoid wastage of resources invested in understanding, implementing and explaining new rules.
4. Launch the Operator selection procedure as early as possible, so that by the time the MoU is signed the implementation agreement with potential Operators could be signed too. The sustainability of the support is strengthened in this way.

7. Short time for programme implementation

Implementation of projects under the Grants in both the 2004-09 and 2009-14 funding periods started two to three years into the funding period, leaving little time for implementation. Given the extended processes of negotiations (Donors States & EU, Donors States & Beneficiary States, FMO & selected Operators), the time for the actual programme implementation and distribution of grants (organization of call of proposals, projects selection, payments, monitoring, reports, capacity building activities, etc.) is significantly contracted. This puts a lot of pressure on the Operators and Grantees to achieve meaningful results agreed at the level of the Programme. A longer period for projects implementation creates opportunities for increased capacity and sustainability of Grantees, consolidated relationships with stakeholders, etc.

The short implementation period also has a significant effect on achieving the bilateral objective – both at the level of interest on the side of the grantees and their partners, as well as the durability of any such partnership.

Having the same amount of funding available for a longer time (and without the breaks between ‘waves’ of funding mentioned above) would allow for strategic use of the funds and lead to significantly more being achieved.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Provide the longest possible time for programme implementation (at least five years from the programme’s launch) through appropriate forward planning. Delays in negotiation processes should not affect the time available for implementation.
2. Make sure that all requirements regarding the programme implementation are contained in the call for proposals (or Terms of Reference) for the selection of the Operators so that the interested applicants know them before they apply. This will allow the potential Operators to include them in the programme proposal (together with the time, financial and human resources necessary for the programme’s proper implementation).
3. Consider the experience and expertise of successful Operators under the current NGO Programmes when defining the selection procedures of the Operators of the future programmes (a simplified procedure will significantly reduce the time for the choice of the Operator to the benefit of an extended period available for Programme implementation).

8. Areas of support versus outcomes

The conceptual framework of the NGO Programme is neither clear nor coherent. It is a complicated mix of outcomes and areas of support, with additional complexity through issues such as bilateral cooperation, cross-border cooperation, complementary action, capacity building, cross-cutting issues and horizontal concerns. There is a lack of correspondence between these different elements and there is no hierarchy among them.

In particular the Operators and the NGOs find the double system of outcomes and areas of support confusing. While the NGO Programmes are usually organized according to areas of support, budgeting is required according to outcomes. Taking into account that areas and outcomes do not correspond to each other, it is hard to understand where each project should fit in this matrix. This double system does not contribute to the quality of programmes and can lead to some artificial outcomes and outputs.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The programme from the beginning should be well structured according to either outcomes or areas of support (also allocations of funds for projects should be made either by areas or by outcomes).
2. Outcomes and areas of support should correspond and be well defined, clearly worded and coherent.
3. Outcomes, outputs, indicators and areas of support should be streamlined and simplified to avoid overlapping and disproportionality.
4. Any additional specific or horizontal concerns should be agreed in advance and integrated into the whole programme structure.

9. Project selection procedure

The Operators are contractually obliged to achieve some definite outcomes and some specific outputs. The standard (compulsory) project selection procedure they have to follow, however, gives the Operators very limited impact (or no impact at all) on what sort of projects are awarded funding. The selection procedure does not give enough space for the Operator to use institutional knowledge and experience in order to select projects for funding that will best contribute to achieving the outcomes and outputs.

The mandatory selection procedure is based on: a) two external assessors who evaluate and independently score each project, leading to a mechanically produced ranking list; and b) a selection committee which is not able to re-evaluate all projects and has to rely on the ranking list. Such a “blind” procedure, attractive as it may be in theory (by reducing subjectivity and increasing transparency) is inadequate in terms of ensuring the quality of the programme and contributing fully to its outcomes.

The very short period provided for programme implementation requires the involvement of a significant number of evaluators. The greater the number of evaluators involved, the less harmonized (calibrated) the evaluations and the risk of less fair the final outcome. Although measures can be taken to minimize the negative effects of this method, it is clear that the associated disadvantages cannot be eliminated.

While both the Selection Committee and the Operator may modify ranking lists submitted to them (automatically built on scores produced by the experts), the constraints set by the procedure (informing the affected applicants of the change if it results in rejection of a project) significantly restrict the room for manoeuvre of both entities, notably if they want to avoid conflicts with NGOs / applicants and/or reputational risk.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Allow for different project selection procedures that both ensure clarity and transparency and fit the local civil society environment. Given the conscious use by the FMO of established and renowned Operators, they should be encouraged to use their expertise and have a greater impact on the selection of projects.
2. Consider introducing options for the project assessment procedure, for example: a two-stage process of submission and selection of applications; assessment of applications by one external and one internal expert (as an alternative to two external experts); exchange of opinion between experts assessing the same application (as an alternative to separate assessment); discussion on projects among experts in order to build the assessments on a consensual basis (as an alternative to mechanically produced ranking lists).
3. Consider empowering the Selection Committee and the Operator with the instruments for making decisions on awarded grants, for example: allow establishment of additional criteria which take into account programme priorities and contribution to the outcomes, adding to the scores provided by the experts in a justified process.

10. Bilateral cooperation fund

The Operators welcome the opportunity to work with NGOs in the Donor States, and as mentioned above, are very much in support of the opportunities provided for networking. The significant barrier created by lack of time for implementation and its impact on reaching the bilateral objective has already been addressed above. Another concern relates to the number of organisations from the Beneficiary States willing to undertake bilateral cooperation which appears to be much bigger than number of entities from Donor States ready for such cooperation.

Even though it concerns a very limited proportion of the funding, the current concept of the bilateral cooperation fund is too complex, which appears to be unclear for the NGOs. It is also difficult for the Operators to fully implement.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. More flexibility needs to be given to the Operators in order to shape the incentives and schemes of grants for bilateral cooperation according to their needs and experience of what works in their country.
2. Allow for establishment of one scheme of grants supporting bilateral cooperation both for the development of projects with entities from Donor States (currently it is ‘seed money’ scheme) and for their involvement in the projects implemented from grants (currently it is ‘micro grants’ scheme).

11. Co-financing requirements

The requirement that NGOs provide co-financing in the amount of 10% of eligible expenditures of the project is unrealistic for the majority of NGOs in the Beneficiary States, even if half of it can be in-kind contribution in the form of voluntary work. The requirement poses a barrier to effective project management as well as the achievement of planned results, since time and resources are dedicated to fund raising by the NGOs.

Insisting on co-financing principle leads to cross-financing projects from various grants by the NGO Programme Grantees. As a result the ownership of the projects as well as the identity of the Donor become opaque. Also documenting voluntary work to satisfy the requirement for in-kind contribution happens to be artificial and is not an effective incentive for civic engagement. Therefore it does not guarantee project ownership as well.

It is the experience of the Operators that Grantees remain full owners of their projects, even if the grant covers 100% of projects’ budget. This is ensured principally by maintaining a clear relationship of grant-maker / grantee, and not acting in a way that could lead to the grantees feeling as though they have been contracted to implement projects they have not designed. As long as this distinction is maintained, ownership by the Grantees is ensured.

The Operators further note that while the EEA and Norway Grants for the funding period 2004-09 set the lowest co-financing requirement for NGOs (10%), as opposed to other types of applicants (15% - 40%), the NGOs are in a current programming period the sole grantees for whom provision of co-financing is an absolute requirement.

RECOMMENDATION

1. Abolish or reduce the level of the mandatory co-financing requirement currently established at 10% allowing the Operators to formulate their own proposition regarding co-financing adjusted to the financial potential of NGOs in each country.

12. Consistency of provisions in governing documents and practice

The Guideline for NGO Programmes states: „The aim is to provide flexible and accessible funding to eligible NGOs” and also: „In the case of Programmes entrusted to the FMO, who will contract a fund operator, the Regulation shall not apply. In such cases only sector-specific issues referred to in this Guideline shall apply and will be reflected in the fund operator terms of reference and in the implementation agreement with the selected operator.”

The Donor States made it clear in their description of the Programme Area as well as in the MoU negotiations that it expected the NGO Funds to be operated by organisations with close ties to the civil society sector and well-experienced with grant-making.

The Fund Operators selected by the FMO are among the most knowledgeable organisations on what is happening in the NGO funding arena in their countries, especially as regards funding gaps. They are also seasoned grantmakers with extensive expertise on effective systems of grants distributions and for this reason they have been selected to operate the NGO Programme. However, their expertise and knowledge is sometimes overshadowed by the requirement to stick to the procedures and provisions described in the standard programme implementation agreement, allowing very limited space to adjust and undertake decisions based on experience and reality check.

In spite of the statements in the Guidelines which allowed for deviation from the Regulations in case of direct contracting of Fund Operator and the clear encouragement to propose innovative approaches, at the stage of negotiating the programme agreement the Fund Operators were confronted with the need to replace their original concept by standard procedures. The compromise solutions reached in effect of the negotiations were unsatisfactory as they often affected the logic of the original concept of the programme proposed by the Operator causing some of the main activities lose in substance.

Additionally, in some cases, once the program implementation agreements were signed and the programmes launched, new activities / requirements were added to the Programmes. These new activities / requirements (such as horizontal concerns, capacity building matrix or audit of projects by external auditors) were introduced without consulting with the Operators and without taking into account whether they had enough time, human and financial resources to cope with them.

The spirit of the Guidelines for NGO Programme is somehow lost in the program implementation agreement where the Regulation articles are primarily used as a basis.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The input of Operators on the NGO-related EEA funding in the next programming period should be considered by the Donor States both as regards substantive issues and the mechanisms of programme implementation.
2. The Guidelines for NGO Programme should clearly state what regulations, procedures, requirements etc. are obligatory, and which of these elements may be subject to changes and modifications. The optimal solution would be to put all regulations, requirements, procedures in one governing document - The Guidelines which would not refer to other documents.
3. The Programme implementation agreement should follow and reflect the approved programme proposal and country specific issues.
4. All additional activities and requirements should be consulted with Operators before they are introduced.

ADDITIONAL CONCERNS

1. Provisions of programme documents affecting NGOs

a. Economic benefit (Regulations, section 5.4.2)

The Guidelines for NGO Programmes define the non-profit character required of grantees, while allowing for justified revenue-generating activities. The development of the civil society sector in Europe is dependent on raising its sustainability, also through the diversification of funding sources. A number of the Operators struggle, however, with interpreting what actually constitutes economic activity and economic benefit.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. NGOs should be encouraged to engage in fundraising and income-generating activities (such as provision of paid services and/or production of goods) the revenue of which must be used as a source of funding for fulfilling the mission of the NGO, including the purposes beyond the limits of the project activities implemented under the NGO Programme. This will serve to increase sustainability and financial independence of NGOs through diversification of their funding sources.

b. Purchase of equipment (Regulations, section 7.3.1.c)

Cost of new or second hand equipment is considered as eligible expenditure “provided that it is depreciated in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles applicable to the project promoter and generally accepted for items of the same kind. Only the portion of the depreciation corresponding to the duration of the project and the rate of actual use for the purposes of the project may be taken into account by the Operator. By way of exception the entire purchase price of new and second hand equipment may be eligible if the equipment is an integral and necessary component for the implementation of the project and is essential for achieving the goals of the project”.

The rule that only depreciation cost for equipment can be covered by a grant (which was not applied in the previous funding period) poses a serious problem for organisations wishing to purchase equipment. The NGOs face also practical problems with exceptions to the stated above rule. Organisations are obliged to put aside funds for insurance for 5 years after the project’s completion. In some cases Focal Point does not want to take the responsibility of enforcing the 5 year rule of the equipment insurance and does not allow for the exception.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Remove limited eligibility of costs for purchase of equipment under the NGO Programmes.

c. Public Procurements

The EEA requirements related to public procurement are sometimes stricter than the national legislation. In some beneficiary countries the threshold for direct procurement is 30 000 Euro, yet NGO Programme imposes a threshold of 5 000 Euro.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Eliminate any financial and legal requirements which are stricter than the national regulations thus creating additional burden to the Grantees.

2. Provisions of programme documents affecting Operators

a. Management cost – lack of proportionality (Regulation, section 7.10.2)

Calculation of management cost is not adequate for NGO Programmes. Currently the fixed percentage (10%) of management cost is set for programmes up to EUR 10 million. In the case of small programmes (and most of NGO programmes are much smaller than EUR 10 million) this presents both challenges in assembling adequately sized team with fair pay (considered qualifications, responsibility and workload) guarantees, and in implementing intense capacity building activities. Capacity building of the NGO sector is and should be regarded as a critical component of success of the NGO Programmes, however not allocating adequate resources for these activities impairs the result.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Management fee shouldn’t be calculated exclusively as a percentage of the programme volume but should take into account the workload connected with expected number of projects, capacity-building activities, audit costs, networking etc.

b. Calls for proposals (Program Implementation Agreement, section 5.3.4)

The requirement to get FMO’s approval of the text of each call for proposals launched by the Operator and based on the approved programme is excessive micro-management.

RECOMMENDATION

1. Prior approval of the texts of the call of proposal should be required only if the Operator introduced changes to what had been presented agreed in the Programme Implementation Agreement and published in the first text of the call of proposals. Notification of FMO should be limited to provision of the call text and the date of its publication.

c. Audit of the management and control system (Program Implementation Agreement, section 2.1.a)

The FMO requires that an auditor submits an opinion according to the description of the management and control system established by the Operator for its Programme. Given the lack of guidance in terms of expectations, the certified auditors contracted by the Operators often from among renowned international companies find it impossible to provide such an opinion, especially in respect of the “assessment of the proportionality of the management and control systems’ requirements in relation to the effectiveness of achieving the objectives of the programmes”. Also, in some beneficiary states the only certified auditors which the national law allows to perform the audit are the financial auditors registered at the national chamber of auditors. They cannot perform and authorise system audits required by Program Implementation Agreement.

RECOMMENDATION

1. Provide adequate guidance to the auditors to allow them to issue an opinion, in particular as regards the ‘assessment of the proportionality of the management and control systems’ requirements in relation to the effectiveness of achieving the objectives of the programmes’. Do not invoke additional conditions not embedded in the Program Implementation Agreement which force the Operator to exert undue pressure on the auditors to formulate their opinion in a specific way without basing it on the concrete standard procedure.

d. Verification of expenditures (Program Implementation Agreement, section 7.3)

There is a significant problem caused by the requirement that the Operator shall ‘certify’ costs. The Operator can check or verify costs, whereas the certification is an action reserved for authorised auditors.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Adapt the wording of the Agreement to reflect the fact that the Operators of the NGO Programmes are neither state entities nor auditors and are not entitled to ‘certify’.

e. DORIS

The Operators are obliged to feed DORIS system with dozens of data and information without clear explanation as to why so much detailed information is needed, or what and whom it serves.

The Operators did not know in advance what kind of data would be required, so they were not able to introduce suitable questions in the grant application form. This forces them to spend additional time and resources to gather data while implementing the programme. There is a serious risk that, with too many detailed data and information required, a large part of it might prove to be false. This is particularly the case considering the complicated structure of the programmes (areas of support versus outcomes).

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. The type and format of information and data that will be needed to report to DORIS should be known in advance to allow Operators to ensure their availability.
2. The number, format and content of required data and information should be reconsidered, streamlined and improved. Certain types of categories need to be added to the menu in DORIS, e.g. ‘association’ as an eligible entity and ‘citizens’ in the list of target groups (given that associations are the main eligible applicant, and ‘Active citizenship fostered’ is one of the outcomes).

3. The optimal solution will be to develop application which would allow to automatically transfer data from Operators databases into DORIS would be more than welcome to reduce the workload of the Operators.

ABOUT YOUR ORGANIZATION

Country

Please choose your country.

How old is your organization?

What are the main fields of activity of your organization? (select up to three main fields)

Number of organizations per field of activity

What are the main types of activities of your organization? (select up to three)

Number of organizations per type of activity

Where are the headquarters (central office) of your organization located?

What are the main levels of work of your organization? (select up to three levels)

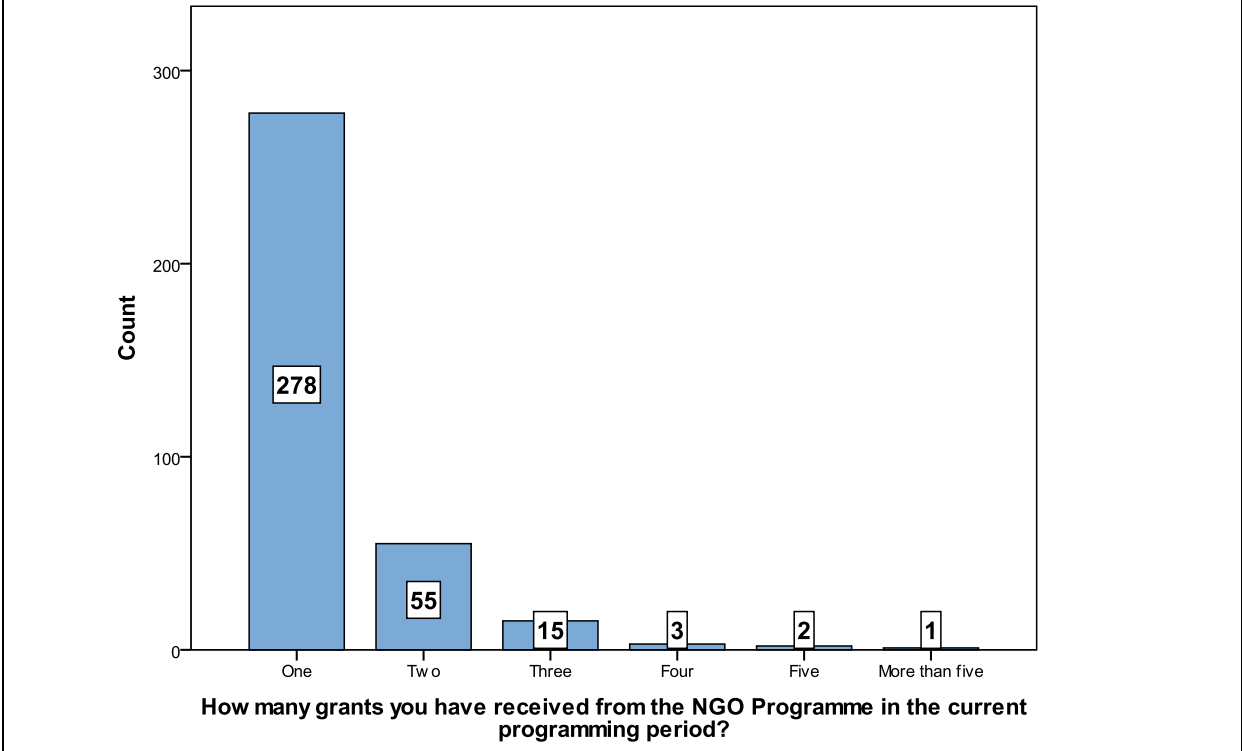

Based on your human resources (number of staff, volunteers, members, etc.) and in the context of the NGO sector in your country how would you define the size of your organization:

What was your annual budget in EUR for 2013

How many grants you have received from the NGO Programme in the current programming period?

What is (will be) the share of all grants you have received from the NGO Programme in the total budget of your NGO for the period of their implementation?

Efficiency of the grants processes of the NGO Programme in your country

How would you assess the NGO Programme application process? Please chose an option for each of the following statements (strongly agree; agree; not sure; disagree, strongly disagree)

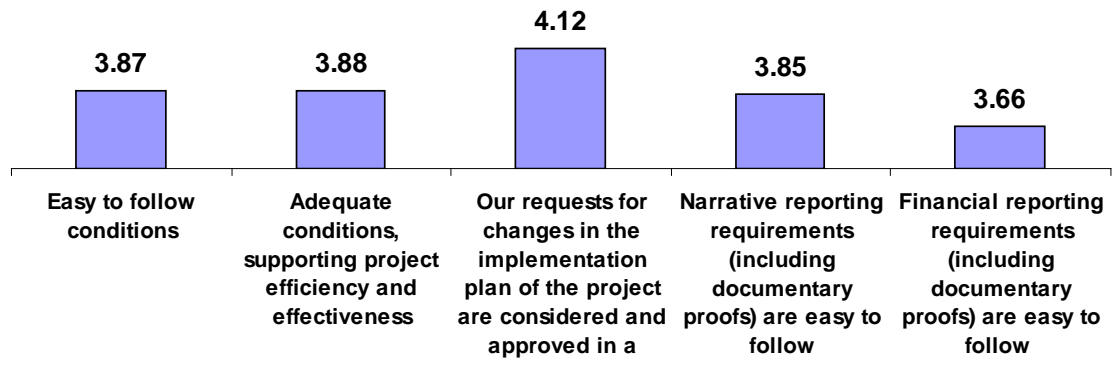

- The deadlines for submitting applications were adequate
- There was clear information on the selection criteria and procedures
- The information meetings organized by the operators provided enough information which helped us to develop the application
- We could easily access and receive additional clarification from the operator’s staff in the process of developing the application
- The application process as a whole was less bureaucratic and more user friendly than other programmes that we have experience with

How would you assess the project implementation procedures? Please chose an option for each of the following statements (strongly agree; agree; not sure; disagree, strongly disagree)

- The conditions of the grant contract put by the Operator of the Programme are easy to follow
- The conditions of the grant put by the Operator of the programme are adequate and will support the efficiency and effectiveness of our project
- Our requests for changes in the implementation plan of the project are considered and approved in a timely and efficient manner
- Narrative reporting requirements (including documentary proofs) are easy to follow
- Financial reporting requirements (including documentary proofs) are easy to follow

How would you assess the project implementation procedures?

How would you assess the balance between the time and resources needed for meeting the administrative requirements of the Programme Operator (reporting, data gathering, questionnaires, etc.) and the work related to the content of your initiative

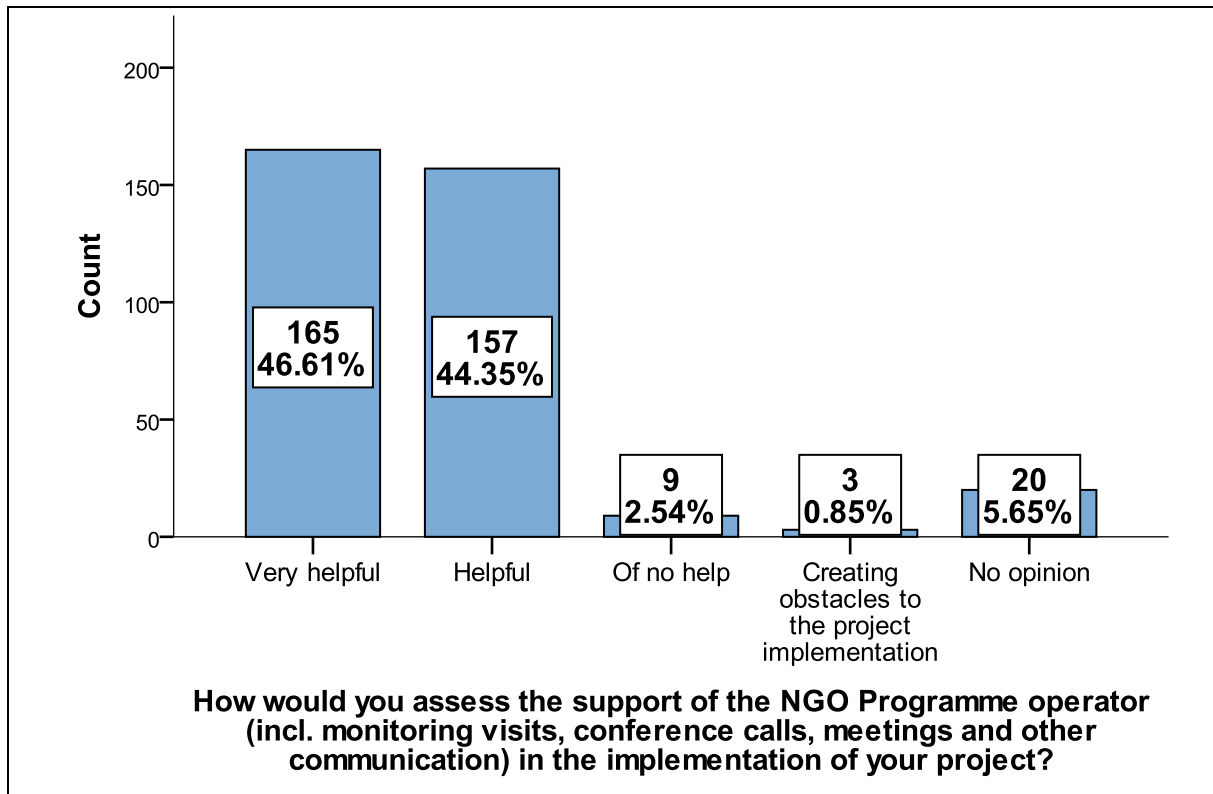

The administrative requirements are taking too much time and resources and negatively affect our work on content

The administrative requirements are reasonable and do not affect our work on the content of the initiative

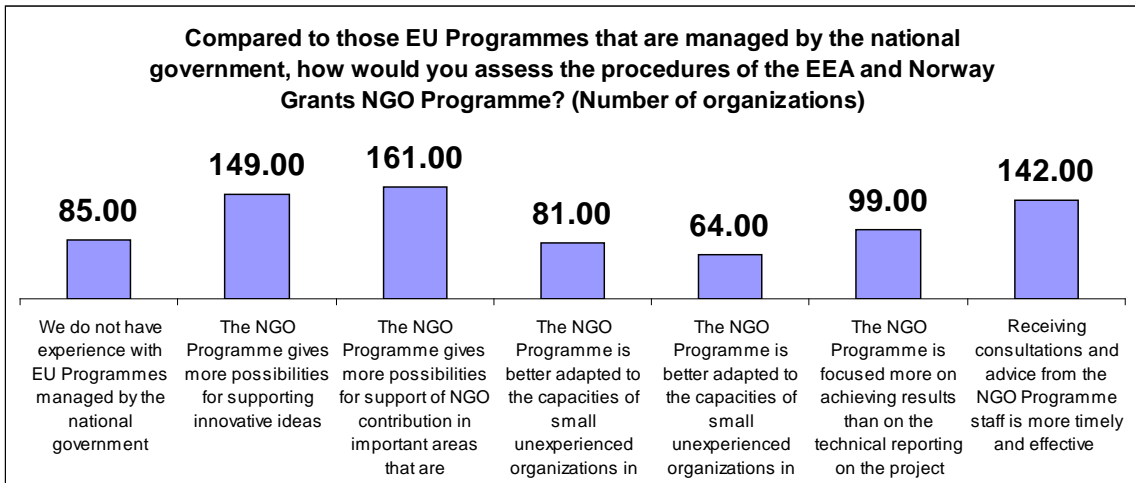

The administrative requirements strengthen the capacity of our organisation and thus support the work on the content of the initiative

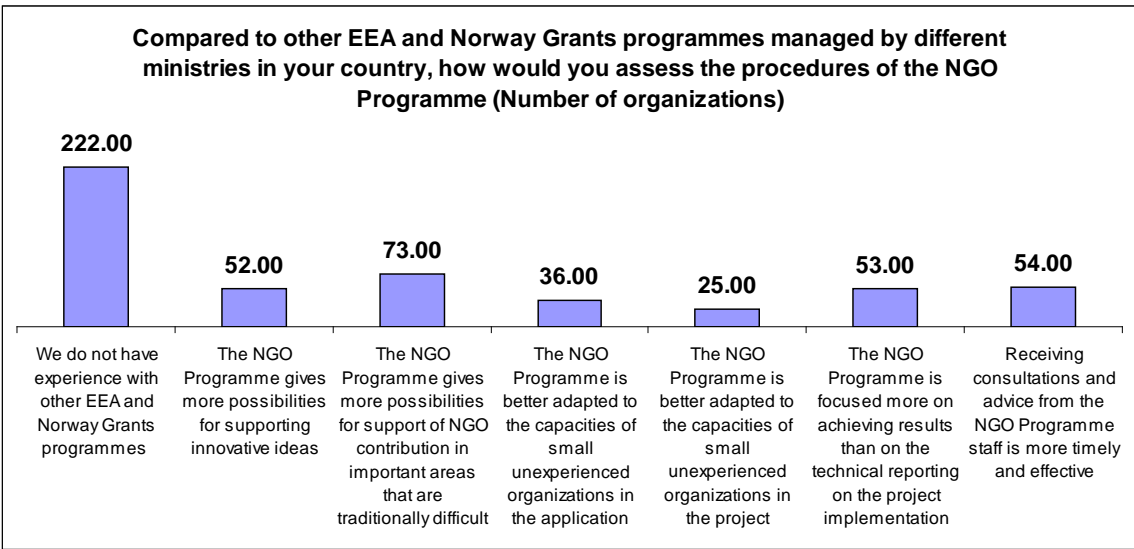

How would you assess the support of the NGO Programme operator (incl. monitoring visits, conference calls, meetings and other communication) in the implementation of your project?

Compared to those EU Programmes that are managed by the national government, how would you assess the procedures of the EEA and Norway Grants NGO Programme? (mark all relevant options)

Compared to other EEA and Norway Grants programmes managed by different ministries in your country, how would you assess the procedures of the NGO Programme: (mark all relevant options)

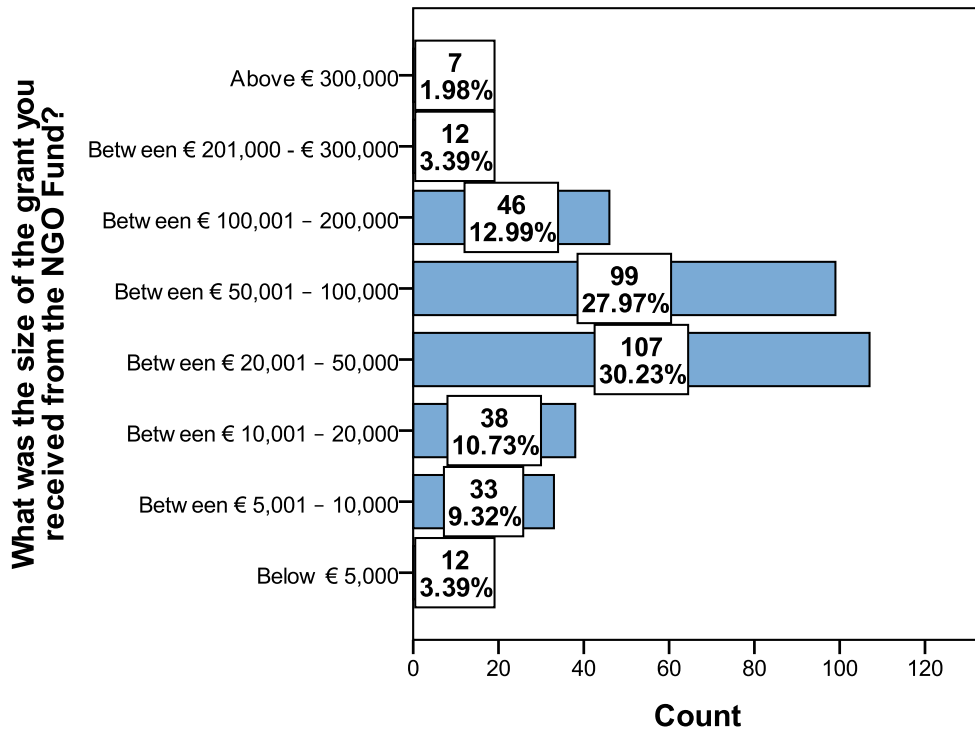

Do you have recommendations for improvement of the efficiency of the grants procedures of the NGO Programme? If yes, please specify

Your project(s) funded by the EEA and Norway NGO Programme

In this section please provide information about the project in which your organization is the leading partner. In case you have more than one such project, please provide information about the one which is more advanced or completed. Don't include projects for capacity building, they will be covered in the next section.

What was the size of the grant you received from the NGO Fund?

Which is the main area or issue that your project focuses on? Please select those options that are relevant

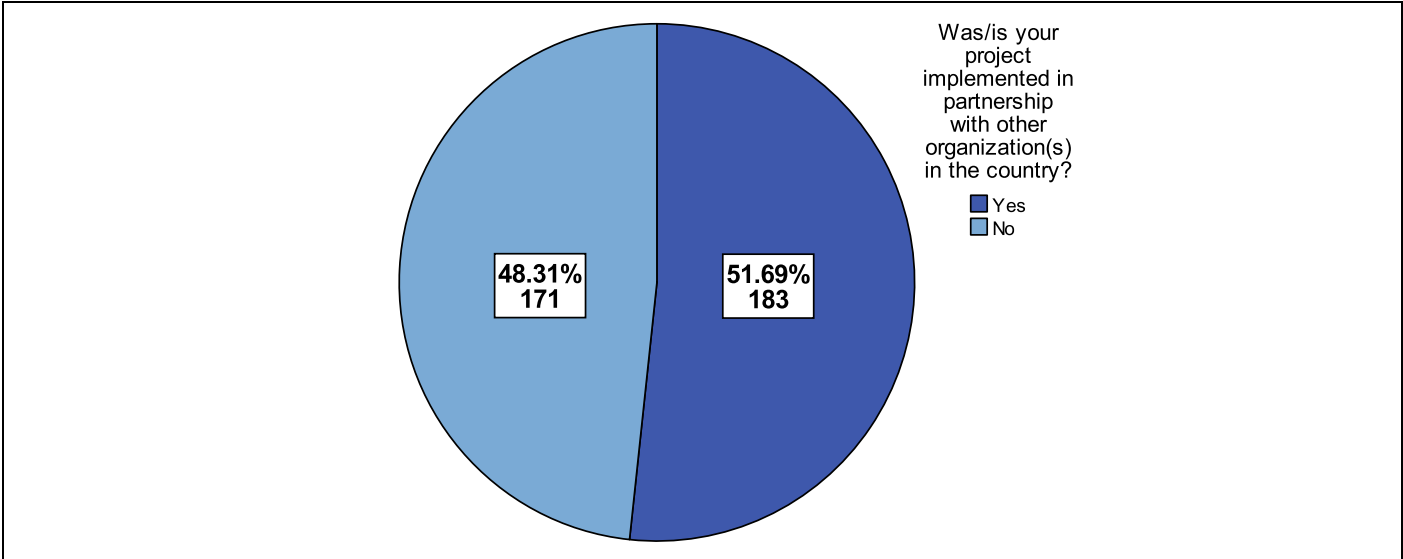

In what stage of implementation is your project?

What changes your project contributed/will contribute to? Please select up to five most relevant

Was/is your project implemented in partnership with other organization(s) in the country?

If yes, how many partners

Which are the key success factors for the achievement of your planned outcomes? Select up to three most relevant

How would you rate the level of innovation of your project?

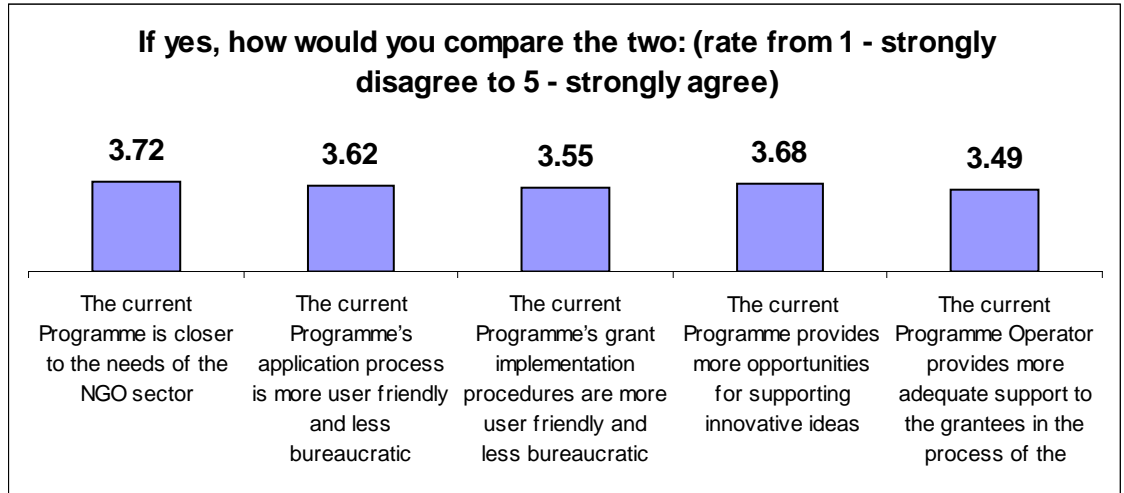

Has your NGO received funding from the EEA and Norway NGO Fund in the previous programming period (2004-2009)?

If yes, how would you compare the two: (strongly agree; agree; not sure; disagree, strongly disagree)

- The current Programme is closer to the needs of the NGO sector
- The current Programme's application process is more user friendly and less bureaucratic
- The current Programme's grant implementation procedures are more user friendly and less bureaucratic
- The current Programme provides more opportunities for supporting innovative ideas
- The current Programme Operator provides more adequate support to the grantees in the process of the project implementation

Effectiveness of capacity building support

Did you receive support for capacity building from the NGO Programme?

If yes, please specify. Choose the most relevant options

Did you receive support for capacity building from the NGO Programme? If yes, please specify.

Which capacity building support and tools do you consider most useful for the development of your organization? Chose up to 5 most relevant.

- Providing for the operational costs of the organization
- Specialized trainings/technical assistance in different areas of civil society work
- Trainings/technical assistance in project design and implementation
- Trainings/technical assistance in strategy development
- Trainings/technical assistance in fundraising/resource mobilization
- Trainings/technical assistance in communication strategies and advocacy
- Trainings/technical assistance in practical skills relevant to the topic of the intervention
- Trainings/technical assistance for improvement of management and governance systems
- Sharing and learning with other organizations
- Supporting small-scale interventions to learn from doing
- Study tours
- Mentoring provided by experts or other organizations
- Others (please specify)

Which capacity building support and tools do you consider most useful for the development of your organization?

Do you have recommendations for improvement of the approach and practice of the provision of capacity building support by the NGO Programme. If yes, please specify.

If yes, in what type of project:

- Funded under the main priority areas of the in-country programme
- Funded by the bilateral relations fund
- Both, we have more than one project involving such partnership

If yes, how was the bilateral partnership developed? Select all relevant options

What is/will be the main contribution of this partnership to your organization and your work?

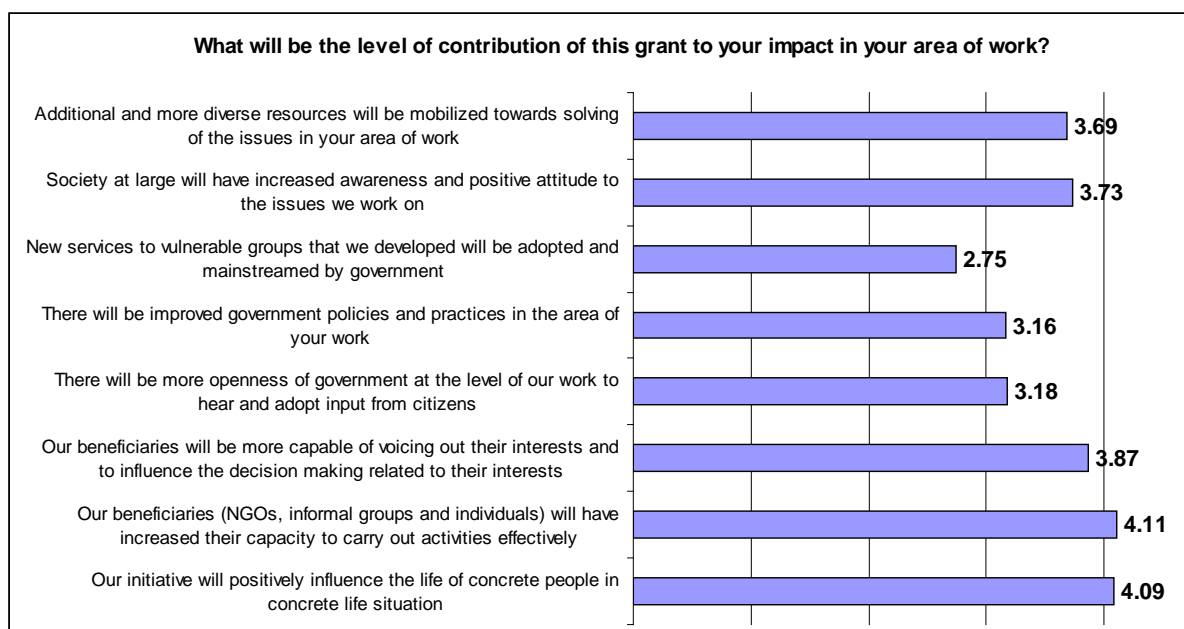

Do you have recommendations for increasing the usefulness of the bilateral relations fund? If yes, please specify.

Impact and sustainability prospects

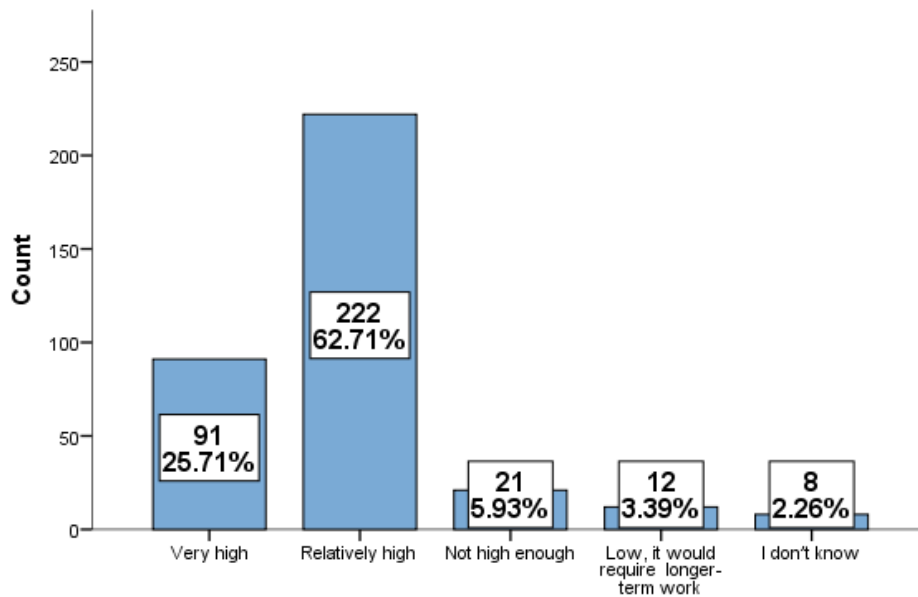

What will be the level of contribution of the NGO Programme grant(s) (both project and capacity building) to the development of your organization? Please rate from 1-5 where 1 is the lowest and 5 is the highest

What will be the level of contribution of this grant to your impact in your area of work? Please rate from 1-5 where 1 is the lowest and 5 is the highest

How would you describe the (anticipated) level of sustainability of the achievements resulting from your project supported by the EEA and Norway Grants NGO Programme?

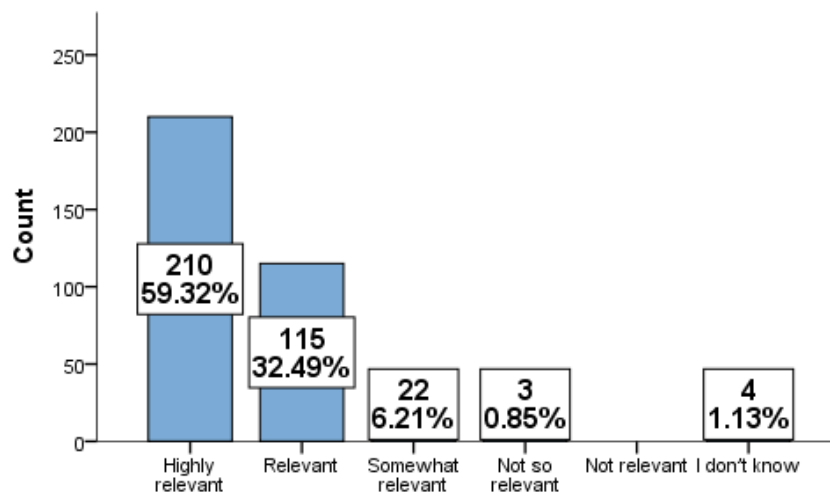

How would you describe the (anticipated) level of sustainability of the achievements resulting from your project supported by the EEA and Norway Grants NGO Programme?
